PAUL'S THEOLOGY

Lesson 60

Gifts - Part 3

Does the name "Charlie Bucket" mean anything to you? How about Violet Beauregarde or Veruca Salt? Maybe you recall Augustus Gloop? These were children from the mind of Roald Dahl, a British writer from the 20th century. Dahl wrote a book entitled Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, which was later made into two movies, one by the same name, and an earlier version Willie Wonka and the Chocolate Factory.

In the story, these children, along with Mike Teavee, win a chance to tour the private chocolate factory of Willie Wonka. Unknown to them at the time, Wonka was looking for a successor to run the factory. Ultimately the choice falls to Charlie because the other children were all more focused about getting what they wanted rather than the actual tour.

Where we focus our attention does not generally affect our opportunities to get a chocolate factory, or even a candy store. But it surely affects our choices in life, our practices and even our beliefs.

If we try to distance ourselves from our daily decisions and refrain from cruising through life long enough to analyze our attitudes, we might find something interesting in this regard. Take church, for example – why do we go to church? We are not looking for the "right" or the "pious" answer; we want the real answer! Try to dig down and ask more specifically, why do we go to church where we do?

Do we go for the "singing" or the "preaching"? If so, dig deeper and ask, "Why?" If we don't like the singing or preaching, do we up and go somewhere else? As we consider this, we likely find many reasons for why we go to church, some good, some better, and some not so good.

Hopefully our reasons do not focus on us. Hopefully the focus is somewhere beyond us. Maybe we go because we think God wants us there (here). Maybe we go because it is a splendid place for our children to grow with the Lord. Maybe we go because we have found a fellowship and friendship with sisters and brothers in Christ. Perhaps we attend because we "fit" and have something to offer the others. We might go because we see God is using this church to great purpose, and we want to be a part of his work.

These examples are reasons that focus on others, rather than the individual. That is good; it is very Pauline! The body of Christ, Paul taught, met together to commemorate/celebrate the risen Lord and to encourage and uplift each other. The real focus for church, and really for life itself, is God.
